REASON FOR ALLOWANCE

1. Higbee discloses a wheel end assembly comprising a spindle defining an axis of rotation, a first wheel hub supported on said spindle by at least one first bearing, a second wheel hub supported on said spindle adjacent to said first wheel hub (22) by at least a second bearing member for rotation about said axis; and at least one bushing mounted between the first and second wheel hubs and radially engaging the first and second wheel hubs relative to the axis to support axial and radial loads between the first and second wheel hubs thereby permitting said first and second wheel hubs (22, 18) to rotate independently from each other. Ash discloses a wheel end assembly comprising a spindle defining an axis of rotation, a first wheel hub supported on said spindle by at least one first bearing, a second wheel hub supported on said spindle adjacent to said first wheel hub by at least a second bearing member for rotation about said axis; and at least one third bearing member mounted between the first and second wheel hubs to permit said first and second wheel hubs to rotate independently from each other. Altemus discloses a tiltable and independently rotatable dual wheel assembly for trucks comprising a center coupling member with keys on the opposing faces to cooperate with keyways on a fixed member. Durham et al are cited to show a related dual wheel assembly comprising an annular housing sheet positioned between the first and second wheel hubs to permit independent rotation of the wheels. However, none of the references of record suggests a wheel end assembly comprising at least one bushing mounted between first and second wheel hubs, wherein said bushing axially and radially engages the first and second wheel hubs to support axial and radial loads between the first and second wheel hubs thereby permitting the first and second wheel hubs to rotate independently from each other in the manner defined in the instant claim 1. Also, none of the references of record suggests a wheel end assembly, wherein a middle wheel hub is positioned on an opposite side of a first and a second wheel hub, at least one third bearing mounted between the inner and middle wheel hubs to permit said inner and middle wheel hubs to rotate independently from each other, whereby at least one fourth bearing member for allowing the third and second wheel hubs to rotate independently from each other with is provided, said fourth bearing member mounted between the second and third wheel hubs in the manner defined in the instant claim 20. Therefore, claims 2-3, 7-9, 15, 18-19, 21-22, depending therefrom are considered to be allowable.
